Dear Parents/Carers,

Our rock stars did us proud today! We loved the effort that so many children had gone to with their costumes, and how hard they tried with their times tables and maths activities, throughout our TTRS themed NSPCC Number Day! Huge thanks to those of you who have donated to the charity. We play music in the lunch hall every Friday, and today's playlist was of course rock themed! A group of Y5 boys managed to get half the school up for a dance on the stage, and then again during our assembly this afternoon! It has been a great day, thanks to the massive effort from our children and staff!

We are very proud to announce this week's Pupils of The Week. Well done everyone!

Safeguarding at Highcliffe: From the National Online Safety website this week:

Apps and sites are all competing for our attention. Over the years, numerous strategies have been developed which are intended to influence users' behaviour – making us more likely to remain on a site, game or platform for longer periods of time. These techniques are known as 'persuasive design' and can have a particularly profound effect on children and young people. Despite these tactics' evident effectiveness, there are still plenty of ways to help prevent yourself (and your child) from being psychologically swayed. This week's #WakeUpWednesday guide (please see attached) breaks down the potential risks posed by persuasive design online – and offers some top tips for recognising and reducing its impact on young people's decision making.

Safer Internet Day—Tuesday 6th February: Please use the link for lots of resources to support keeping your child safe online: <https://saferinternet.org.uk/safer-internet-day/safer-internet-day-2024/education-resources>

Children's Mental Health Week: The children will be marking this next week by taking part in workshops, lessons and assemblies, to raise awareness and support them in protecting their own mental health as well as their friends' and families'.
